CYPRIPEDIUM (Lady's Slipper)

Cyripedium formosanum

PERENNIAL 12-14" x 12-14"    z6

Early spring shoots unfold to reveal two broad, crinkled, decorative leaves from the center of which unfurls a flower with a large, inflated, pastel-pink-to-white lip and a dimple-like orifice. These are surrounded by light apple-green-and-pink tepals. Lip and tepals are mottled or streaked with darker purple. Requires 2 to 3 hours of early morning or late afternoon sun and dappled shade the remainder of the day.

Cyripedium kentuckiense

PERENNIAL 16-20' x 8-10"   z3

The largest flowered of all the cyripedium and one of the easiest to grow. Petals and sepals are striped a greenish color and mottled with purple, while the very large lip, or pouch, is a creamy ivory or pale yellow. The plant can reach up to 20" tall and has bract-like leaves that are up to 4" long. Each plant is usually single-flowered, with blooms lasting about 2 weeks. Best grown in shade with 2-3 hours of morning sun. The most tolerant variety of high soil temperatures.

Prefers a lightly shaded area and cool, moist, rich soil.
